The College Regatta—Yale Wins Both the Races.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., July 17.—The regatta to-day was a success in every detail. The water was as smooth as could be desired, and there was nothing that the most fastidious could object to in any respect. Positions were drawn as follows: University race—First, Amherst; second, Agricultural; third, Yale; fourth, Harvard; fifth, Columbia; sixth, Wesleyan; seventh, Williams; eighth, Dartmouth; ninth, Trinity; tenth, Bowdoin; eleventh, Cornell. Freshmen's crews—Third, [illegible] fifth, Yale; seventh, Harvard. The Amherst boat was one hundred feet from the west shore; all others seventy feet apart, and the last two hundred feet from the east shore. Among the private bets was one of $50 on Harvard, Agricultural and Cornell against the field; 25 to 60 that Harvard would win over all; 25 to 15 that Harvard would beat Bowdoin; 30 to 30 that Agricultural would beat Bowdoin. The Wesleyans, who all along had been pretending they expected to come out last, were offering to make even bets against any other crew.

The Freshman Race.

[illegible], Mass., July 18.—The Freshmen's race had been timed to begin at [illegible] but did not come off till 17 minutes past [illegible]. A splendid start was made, Harvard [illegible] but that was soon left in the rear by Yale and Amherst. Yale finally passed the [illegible] boat ahead, gaining the race in 17 [illegible]; Amherst coming in next in 18 minutes 34½ seconds, Harvard bringing up the rear in 18 minutes and 34 seconds. The start in the [illegible]

A [illegible] Story.

NEW YORK, July 18.—A correspondent of the [illegible] under date of Boston, June 19th, makes a [illegible] conversation with [illegible], in which the Prince, after [illegible] to his weariness of spirits, [illegible]: "The truth is, there are not [illegible] in Germany, on our side, [illegible] apprehend the real meaning of the conflict in which we are engaged, and in which, notwithstanding our six years [illegible] thus far, I now believe we shall be beaten. Men say [illegible] must have something to worship. Well, [illegible] let them worship the State. Let it take the place of the family as well as of the deity. Let it be the deity in two generations. If we had the field wholly to ourselves we could so obliterate the idea of God and of [illegible] man by him as their creator that the substitution of the State in his place would be effected, and the State, as in [illegible], be all in all. He said, [illegible] me more than the [illegible] which I have received from Protestant churchmen of England and America. I have wished [illegible] that I might crush Christianity. They praised me for my services in the cause of what they called reformed Christianity. If anything could console for the [illegible] I am to endure for [illegible] would be to witness the amazement of the good friends of mine when [illegible] understand the truth, but understand it they never will."

Saturday from Pau and Bayonne he reached Ustalitz at 5 o'clock in the morning, on horseback, accompanied by two French Legitimists, one Carlist officer, and four correspondents. He left immediately for the Spanish frontier. The party wore no arms or uniform, all wearing citizens' clothes, and carrying foreign passports. Near the foot of the Pina Plata the Marquis of Valdespina and General Lizarraga were waiting with a grand escort. Here Carlos donned a brilliant uniform and the party proceeded to [illegible], where several thousand troops were encamped. All the Republican prisoners were released, the cannons of the fort were fired and the day given to universal hilarity. There are 40,000 troops here, but the main force is near Elico, on the coast of Biscay, to cover the landing of cargoes of arms and ammunition from English ships. One hundred and sixty have come in and surrendered at this reservation and forty at San Carlos. Chatterpan says his empire is for peace. He has given so many evidences of good faith that Gen. Crook has made him sergeant of the police force of Indian scouts.

SAN DIEGO, July 18.—The Tucson Citizen of the 14th contains the following: On Thursday a courier came to Lowell with an order for a company of cavalry to join in the scout under way by Major Brown. CHIRICAHUA, Arizona, July 16.—Information was brought to this Agency night before last that a band of Natiza had a captive boy at Chiricahua mountains, whom they had just brought from Sonora or Chihuahua. Capt. Jefferds found the boy at the above mentioned rancherie in the possession of an Indian named Herodimo. He (Jefferds) took possession of him and brought him to this place. The Indians demanded ransom for the boy's release, but did not find Capt. Jefferds one of the ransoming kind. The boy gives his name as [illegible] Ignacio Roche. He is about eight years old, very intelligent for his age. He says he was taken from the town of Concepcion, in the State of Chihuahua, where his father and mother are living. He was taken while herding cattle. The party of Indians who took him numbered about twenty. They did not take any cattle he was herding, but took four horses. They did not bring any of the stolen horses upon the Reservation. The Indians divided up before they came here, all that portion of them having horses keeping on towards the north. He has been with the Indians about eleven days, when he was taken from them by Capt. Jeffards.

Last night Robinson, the man who caused the arrest of Gordon in Oakland, on a charge of incest with his (G.'s) daughter, Katie Gordon, married the girl in this city. She is fourteen years old and Robinson is thirty-four. The consent of the girl's parents to the marriage was given in writing. No relatives of either party were present at the wedding. Rev. Mr. Jewell performed the ceremony.

A crowd of hoodlums near the corner of Dupont and Green streets last night, pelted a Chinaman with stones, one of which struck him on the face, cutting him in a frightful manner. No arrests. The police might better protect these people from these constant brutal assaults than spend so much time and energy in efforts to secure a certain amount of fresh air for them. It is a disgrace to this city that such cowardly savage performances can be committed every day to go unpunished. The perpetrators of such acts are worse than heathens.

It provides for a committee on platform and resolutions, and places the following matters before the Convention for its consideration: The policy of nominating candidates for municipal offices, and nomination of candidates for the Legislature. Little else was done. Richard Chute addressed the Convention. He intimated strongly that the railroad monopoly has entire control of the majority of the Convention. He was frequently interrupted, and finally said he would give notice that at the next meeting Friday evening he would introduce resolutions pledging candidates to a reduction of railroad charges. He was declared out of order, and the Convention adjourned.

The attendance at the races at Agricultural Park to-day was large. The weather was at first favorable, but toward evening it grew cold, foggy and disagreeable. The stake was driven to obtain a sight. The location of the terminus will be at Constance Cove, it is thought, and it was reported last evening that Hon. Dr. Helmcken, the Pacific Railway Director, will turn the first sod to-morrow.

AN EXCHANGE OF COMPLIMENTS.

The following letter of Lesage Seget, President of the republic at Hayti, to Hon. Chas. Sumner, has been received:

REPUBLIC OF HAYTI, PORT AU PRINCE, Sept. 24, 1872, Sixty-ninth year of Independence.—Honorable Senator: I seize eagerly the good opportunity offered me by the departure of our minister, Citizen S. Preston, to pray you receive testimony of my high consideration, which does not cease to grow by reason of the eminent services which you render daily to the noble cause of an oppressed people. I should consider myself as failing in one of my most imperious duties if I did not express to you the sentiments of gratitude which your name awakens in the breast of everyone belonging to the American race. In assuming the defense of the rights of this people, guided by the most generous sentiments of your rich nature, by a sincere love of justice you have acquired an immortal title to the gratitude of all descendants of the African race. Please to receive the feeble expression of my high esteem for the noble character of an illustrious citizen, and believe in the depth of sentiments with which I declare myself, honorable senator, your devoted friend,

LESAGE SEGET.

The following is Mr. Sumner's answer:

WASHINGTON, July 4.—I cannot at this late day acknowledge the letter with which you have honored me without explaining the reason of my delay. Owing to my absence in Europe, where I had gone for my health, I did not receive your valuable communication until some time in the winter, when it was put in my hands by your excellent minister. Continuing feeble in health, I reluctantly postponed this acknowledgment. I now take advantage of convalescence to do thus tardily what my feelings prompted at an early day.

Please, sir, accept my thanks for your generous appreciation of what I have done, and your kindness in letting me know it under your own hand, but I beg you to understand I do not deserve the praise with which you honor me. In advocating the cause of an oppressed people, I have only acted according to my conscience. I could not have done otherwise, and now my only regret is that I have done so little. I wish I had done more. In the history of mankind, the crime against the African race will stand forth in terrible eminence, always observed and never forgotten. Just in proportion as civilization prevails will this enormous wrong be apparent in its true character, and men will read with astonishment how human beings guilty of only being black, were sold into slavery. And then, such was the continuing injustice toward this unhappy people, how when slavery ceased they were still treated with indignity by persons whose lordly pretensions were founded on the skin only. As these things are seen in increasing light, they will be condemned in no uncertain words, nor will the denial of equal rights on account of color escape the judgment awarded to slavery itself. Human conduct on this question is a measure of character. Where the African race is enslaved or degraded; where it is exposed to any indignity or shut out from that equality which is a primal right of humanity, there civilization is still feeble. To the certain triumph of civilization I look with constant hope. It is sure to come, and one sign of its arrival will be that prevailing sentiment which recognizes the perpetual obligations of equal justice to all and the duty to repair past wrongs by compensations in the future. In the great debt of the whites to the blacks, there is a bank from which for generations to come the latter can draw. Accept, Mr. President, the expression of my ardent hope for the peace, prosperity and happiness of the republic of Hayti, and allow me to subscribe myself, with true regard, your faithful friend,

CHARLES SUMNER.

To the president of Hayti, &c., &c.

It lay coiled up in the fireplace of an old cabin, which McCann was about filling up with hay. He killed it with a large rock. The rattles were cut off and brought over to Humbug by Elijah Clark. Thirteen is a large number for the largest sized rattlesnakes, but nineteen astonished everybody, as they never heard of a rattlesnake with that many rattles before.

Colonel Lewis, who intended to act as counsel for Captain Jack and other Modocs, arrived too late, having reached Fort Klamath about fifteen minutes before the Court adjourned. It is rumored that Captain Jack, Sconchin and Boston Charley were convicted, though nothing definite is known, as the finding was privately sealed and sent on to Washington. It is very likely these these worthies will swing. It was also supposed that the Lost River murderers would be turned over to the civil authorities. Those who acted as scouts were the meanest of the lot, and have only saved their necks by aiding the Government and turning State's evidence.

OREGON.

Cougars kill calves close to the confines of Oregon City.

C. F. Beatie, Esq., has resigned the position of Deputy Sheriff of Clackamas county.

Rev. I. D. Driver will preach at the Court House at Albany next Sabbath morning.

The Bedrock Democrat nominates Judge McArthur as the Democratic candidate for Congress.

The average temperature at Baker City for the week ending July 12th, was 76.8 degrees above zero.

Ex-Sheriff Harvey Smith of Umatilla county, died at his residence on Willow Creek on the 30th ult.

Funds are being raised for the purpose of purchasing a bell for the Baptist Church of Oregon City.

The Albany Foundry hands are all busy repairing agricultural and farm machinery for the approaching harvest.

An Albany man was told to sand paper his nose to keep his specks on. He tried it and now spees its a miserable sell.

One of the heaviest hail storms known for many years visited Sparta, Baker county, on the 10th inst. Hail laid on the ground to the depth of six inches.

Two sheep killing dogs, who, last Sunday, went into the mutton business in Benton county, are now ready for the "sassige" market. It was a double-barreled shotgun that fixed 'em.

A few days ago a little child of John McCarty, living near Bethel, Polk county, was severely, though not fatally, scalded by the stove upsetting and spilling a kettle of hot water over it.

Miss Lena Kimball, of South Salem, met with a painful accident last Saturday. While splitting some kindling wood with a hatchet, the instrument glanced and partly buried itself in her right foot.

The manner in which much of the wood received in this market is put up, is a source of loss to both buyer and seller. If farmers would pay more attention to this subject, they would be the gainers by it.

The Albany Register says about one hundred and fifty Chinamen took their departure for the Greenhorn and Donica bars, on the Santiam, on Wednesday. They got away with six wagon loads of grub and traps.

Newton Zumwalt, of Polk county, met with a painful accident last Sunday. He was on his way to Lewisville, and while riding along the road his horse fell upon him, breaking one of his legs just below the knee.

Following are the officers of Lebanon Grange, organized at that place last Tuesday: R. A. Irvine, Master; R. C. Miller, Overseer; P. C. Burkhart, Lecturer; Jason Wheeler, Steward; J. N. McDonald, Chaplain; William Ralston, Gate Keeper. Thirty members signed the roll.

From a gentleman who has just returned from up the valley, we learn that the wheat harvest has begun. In many fields the [illegible] are at work and farmers are "shouting the harvest home." The last few days of sunshine have saved many tons of hay which it was feared would be lost.

A. Lafayette, who principally half soles horses for a business, having last spring become enamored of the fortune-promising flax culture, went forth to buy seed to sow an acre of spare ground. He got them, so he thought; but imagine his chagrin when a crop of oats rewarded him for his pains.

Hon. C. W. Fitch, of Eugene, went upon the McKenzie to fish the other day, and, in trying to ford the river on a riffle, he was washed into the water about twenty feet deep. He only saved himself from a watery grave by the most superhuman efforts, after drifting down the turbid stream for some distance.

Tom Attley, of Linn county, was chased by a cougar last week, while hunting in the mountains near Fish Lake. He tore furiously through the brush for about two miles, and when he arrived in camp his attire was not much in excess of that worn by our first parents before Eve ate the forbidden fruit.

John Parker has returned from Ochoco, and is another witness against the claims to richness of the mines over there. He says that when he left the water had about given out, and the miners were much discouraged at the future prospects of "the diggings." It is probable they will shortly be abandoned.

Seven miles of the Albany and Santiam Canal has been completed, and the balance, five miles, is rapidly approaching completion. The portion completed is the heaviest and most costly, the seven miles completed having cost about three-quarters of the whole sum to be expended upon the improvement. It is highly probable that the entire canal will be completed within the coming two months; that is, some time in September next.

An observant farmer in from the country informs the Statesman that the damage to grain from lodging will not prove so great as had been anticipated. He estimates that there are not 100 acres of lodged wheat in the Wallamet Valley. In all the hill or uplands there is but little, and in many neighborhoods none at all. In the case of oats thrown down by the last rain, the loss will not be total, as the grain can be reaped and cured for hay. In the case of late lodged wheat some value can be saved by turning hogs in upon it.

The Albany Democrat hears of a young man near Eugene, who was last week bitten by a rattlesnake, and his father rode swiftly four miles to town and got a gallon of whisky. After the victim of the cruel "sarpint" had absorbed about half of the contents of the jug he became garrulous, and triumphantly told that he had "suiped" the old man—having only been bitten by a harmless little garter snake. Oak scrubs are scarce in that neighborhood now, and the facetious young man can't bear to lie on his lacerated back. He says that the old man is an eminent threshing machine when his "dander" is up.

A gentleman recently at Eugene City says: "The first story of the State University, now under construction at Eugene, is about up and the work progressing rapidly. The material and workmanship seem to be of the most superior kind, and the style of architecture of the edifice is unobjectionable. The site of the building is on an elevated mound, overlooking the city from the south side, and commanding a magnificent view of the really classic scenery of the country. Those having the matter in charge have certainly displayed excellent taste and judgment in the selection of the grounds for the University, for a more healthful and enticing location could not be found."

The Albany Democrat tells of an irate old gent in Marion county, who last Fourth sent a young Santiamer up in the boot and shoe business for trying to take one of his girls to the celebration. The old man took the girl to the blow-out himself, and after they got there and mingled a while in the crowd, the young Santiamer fell in with the girl and the two stole the old man's chicken dinner and black bottle, and left the hard-hearted old fellow dinnerless and thirsty for the day. The young folks had lots of fun over that dinner and "licker," kissing and drinking between bites, while the old man vainly hunted for them, armed with a pine sapling and a pair of ox-hide boots.

A letter from Salem, dated the 18th, says: "The store of Weatherford & Co., druggists, of this city, was entered by burglars last night, the safe broken open in the top, and contents extracted. The burglars entered by removing a few bricks—enough to admit an arm to draw down the cross-bar fastening. The safe had evidently been opened by means of a cold chisel and crow-bar. Dr. Weatherford has been rusticating with his family in the mountains, and had the safe-keys in his pocket, and until he returns the amount of money taken cannot be ascertained. The work has doubtless been performed by an experienced burglar. There is some excitement about it, as there have been two or three minor operations of the same nature performed within the past few evenings."

THE TERRITORIES.

Horse thieves haunt many parts of Utah Territory. Buckshot judiciously applied is a sure remedy.

"Terminus" is about the only matter now receiving attention at the hands of Puget Sound editors.

Colorado Territory claims to be the best wool-growing country in the United States, "barrin" the wolves.

Bishop Morris is expected to officiate in St. John's Chapel, Olympia, this Saturday evening and to-morrow forenoon and evening.

The old steamboat Eliza Anderson, built at this place several years ago, will be taken to Tacoma, moored and fitted up to be used as a hotel.

A serious accident occurred at the Bellingham Bay coal mines last Tuesday, whereby two miners were badly injured by coal falling on them from overhead.

The stage running from Boise to Umatilla ran into a ditch seven miles this side of Town Hill on the 1st inst. The driver was thrown to the ground, one of the wheels passing over his arm and bruising it badly. The horses ran a short distance and stopped, without doing any great damage.

Notwithstanding the excitement regarding the "terminus," Olympia continues her march of improvement. Several fine dwellings, to cost about $1,000 each, are in course of erection; also buildings for other purposes are going up, lots are being cleared, and other evidences of progress are visible.

Since the culmination of the terminus excitement, the Land Office in Olympia has been thronged with men filing notices and entering land in Pierce county. Register and Receiver have been kept busy attending to the wants of their numerous visitors, in whose estimation the most worthless tracts of lands have suddenly acquired immense value. "It is an ill wind that blows nobody good."

Speculators from the lower Sound and Victoria are crowding into Tacoma, as, also, are all the unemployed class, all "waiting for something to turn up." It is reported that they have the largest bed at the village ever spread in the Territory. It was a bed of saw dust, in which some twenty or more luckless wights were forced to ensconce themselves for protection from the night dews, and it is said their time by day is alternated between brushing off musquitoes and picking out [illegible] splinters. Surveyors are laying off sections 31 and 32 into a new town plat, which is to conform to the present one in the direction of streets and size of blocks. So says the Olympia Courier.

FROM THE TERMINUS.

[Olympia Tribune, July 17th.]

By invitation of Captain Starr, we went to the terminus on the North Pacific last night. A very large number of passengers went down, one-third of whom got off at Tacoma. The place, already full and more, became overflowing, and men slept in their blankets all through the brush and over the sawdust. We slept soundly and serenely, with a number of others, on the wharf, with the waters of Puget Sound splashing beneath us, and the blue, starry vault of heaven above us.

Among the Olympians there are D. J. Quimby, already deeply engaged in the hotel business; Mr. Waldron, keeping a restaurant; Uncle Benny, a bar; R. S. McClearn, a barber shop; Frank Hicks, a livery stable; Charley Weed, in the surveying party; A. J. Babcock, working around the mill; C. W. Ridgway, looking out for a place for his furniture shop, and George Allen for a blacksmith shop for himself and his partner, William Clark. John Dooley is to-day moving into a new butcher shop, and Al. Evance is teaching school. Gus. Adams is on hand. Mr. Fitzhurst has also received a contract for boarding sixty or more railroad surveyors and other employes, and will go down on Saturday with his equipment. Mr. Edward Sykes was also looking up a resting place for his Eliza Anderson Hotel, and Mr. William Billings has completed arrangements for the sale of his brick.

Quite a number are there from Seattle, including a cobbler, a grocer, a sign painter, and a branch of John Pennell's squaw brothel.

C. P. Ferry has commenced the erection of a dwelling, and will go into the real estate business.

E. C. Ingalls, of Kalama, is in Tacoma, for the purpose of opening a store.

The railroad company commenced their survey of the terminus city this morning. A force of twenty men, in two divisions, commanded by Captains Smith and Eastwick, and under the supervision of General James Tilton, commenced the work about one hundred and fifty yards from the mill, and will run their lines up the bay. The surveys will occupy about thirty days. Forty more men commenced clearing off the brush from one hundred acres of land, which, when platted, will be the first offered for sale. More men are also wanted, and, if they can be got, we were assured by railroad officials, five hundred would be employed, and the construction of docks, depot and other buildings commenced next week.

Judge Rice, Captain Ainsworth and General Sprague are coming over again in a few days.

It was reported at Tacoma, though we did not learn certainly, that the necessary telegrams passed over the wires this morning, consummating the purchase from Ackerson & Co., by the railroad company, of the mill there for the sum of $105,000.

For lots in the present town of Tacoma, $600 apiece are asked, and $15 a month rental.

The Washington Chronicle is not very well up in its geography, if the following item is a specimen: "Road agents, a polite term appropriated by the etiquette of the far West for the designation of highway robbers, continue to flourish in that region. Recently a party of three stopped a stage some twenty-one miles from Marysville, in Oregon. The Marysville paper announces that the police are on the alert, but it is hard to believe that its hope that they will succeed in catching the rascals is likely to be realized."

A cable telegram from Europe informs Professor Henry, of the Smithsonian Institution, of the discovery of a comet at Vienna, located two hours and seven minutes of right ascension, and four degrees thirty-four minutes south declination. Appearance faint, and motion yet unknown. The discovery of three comets have been telegraphed by cable to Europe, and the above described from there to this country.

SATURDAY MORNING, JULY 19 1873

OUR NEW DRESS

This morning the OREGONIAN salutes its subscribers in a new dress. The old type that has for so long greeted our readers regularly has been replaced by new, in every department of the paper. There is now no handsomer advertising type on the coast than that of the OREGONIAN, and the reader need not be told how much its reading matter will be improved by pulling off the old and faded dress, for the bright new one.

Instead of imitating the manner of some of the so-called "live papers" with which Oregon has been more or less acquainted of late, and announcing from time to time, with a flourish of trumpets, what wonders we were just going to have in the way of new material, we have chosen rather to go steadily along with the work, keeping pace with the progress of the country and of events, as becomes a paper that is alive indeed and expects to remain so. The late Herald was an example of the "live paper." It proclaimed its new dress and its new press that were to be, and reproclaimed them. And they came; but the new type never was laid in the cases, and the new press was never set up. Such financial embarrassments surrounded the concern that the vendors of the new material were compelled to reclaim their property, and the "live paper" died. The Herald was a specimen case. This shouting about the great things one is going to do in the future is usually a prophesy as well as a boast, but as a prophesy it goes, like Rory O'More's dream, by contraries. So, having postponed our self-gratulations till the new dress is an accomplished fact, we may be excused for calling attention to it. The OREGONIAN office is now as nearly perfect as the latest improvements can make it, from type to folding and mailing machines.

THE PEOPLE HAVE TRIUMPHED.

The railway companies of Illinois have been forced at last to accept the doctrine of State supervision of their tariffs. Successful in the first case they contested before the courts, the same decision which gave them the victory in the case at bar laid down also the principles of law applicable to the relations between railway companies and the States through which their roads are constructed, in terms that left nothing for the companies to do in the future but to accept the situation and submit to such treatment at the hands of the Government as carriers have been wont to receive hitherto. So they have revised their freight tariffs to make them comply with the law, and submitted them to the State Railway Commissioners for their approval or modification. This result of the contest in Illinois is the one that will be yet reached in every State in [illegible] and never will be any good argument made against the right of the commonwealth to exercise supervisory control over this, the same as over any other matter affecting the public welfare. It is a right that exists in the very nature of government, and although owing to the popular pressure that always exists in favor of the companies, while the construction of their respective roads is going on, this right of the State may not be fully recognized and freely exercised till the system of roads in the country is pretty well completed; still it will then be decided by the courts and generally accepted as the true and only safe doctrine. No general branch of trade, in which the whole public is interested, has ever yet been able to escape the supervision of the sovereignty under which it was carried on, and none ever will do so while the principles of the common law remain the foundation of our system of Government, and the basis of our jurisprudence. What has lately taken place in Illinois will take place in every State and Territory in the Union where there are railways to be looked after. The work may be imperfect at first, as it manifestly is imperfect in Illinois. The companies may outwit the Commissioners, or may corrupt them. On the other hand the Legislatures may in some instances impose too severe terms upon the companies. But these are imperfections that experience and mutual interests will finally adjust. The victory is won when the right of supervision is established. The rest must be left to the wisdom of the Legislature, and the enlightenment and integrity of the courts.

The Illinois State Journal states the true mission of the Republican party in a nutshell: "The Republican party came into existence to right the wrongs of the people. This is still its great mission. When it has accomplished its work it may give place to some other political organization but not before."

This is the entire case which the party has to make before the country. Presumptively it is as well able to take care of the rights and redress the wrongs of the people as it ever was. If it is not so in fact it is not because its principles are unsound, but because bad men have got possession of its organization and are wielding its power. The thing then for the Republicans to do, is not to be captured by any new party schemes, but to exert their power to purge their own party of its corruptions, so that it may go on to the accomplishment of its high mission unencumbered.

The Tichborne claimant's misfortunes are winning sympathy from the poorer classes of England who send their pennies from all parts of the country to aid him in his defense. The "misfortune" of the famous claimant is that he fell through a flooring a few weeks since and cut his knee and head. The possible death of the claimant is a rather startling suggestion. What huge tones of discussion rise to the view in contemplating such a contingency! What volumes of stately magazine discussion and penny-a-line wrangling would be the inevitable result! Why, the conundrum "Who was Junius?" fades into utter insignificance when compared with this—"Was he the claimant?" for in that event the question of Sir Roger's identity would always remain undecided and his adherents could say his case never had been fairly tried. We hope for the sake of the peace of unborn millions that this attack of erysipelas will yield to the costly medicaments of Sir Roger's (?) physicians.

HARVARD AND THE GIRLS

Harvard University must have been the Alma Mater of ex-President Thiers. The predominant trait of the French statesman's character was the combination of thoroughly radical theories with thoroughly conservative practices. Wholly sceptical in his private opinions and with his confidential friends, he was a devout Christian in his public conduct, a political radical, in the deep, French sense of the term, in his individual opinions, and yet avowing the belief that a conservative monarchy was the best form of government for France, he was nevertheless President of a representative republic. And yet M. Thiers was not inconsistent with himself. His apparent inconsistencies arose out of the doctrine interwoven through all his system of social philosophy, that what is right in theory may be wrong in practice, that what is abstractly right may be inexpedient. Hence his administration of public affairs, his statesmanship, was merely the philosophy of expedients reduced to practice, while his own convictions were the philosophy of absolute principles.

Even such a character is Harvard University manifesting. She believes in the German idea that education, after the rudimental stages are past, is a thing that depends mainly upon the student, and not upon the school, and yet she refuses to recognize that fact by abandoning her Anglo-American practice of compulsory recitations in the college course. She compromises between her theoretical university and the actual gymnasium of the Germans, and allows her students to play truant a part of the time. She puts forth the theory that post graduating schools, and especially schools of the professions should not be expected to do more than lead the student to a general understanding of the fundamental principles of the subject he is prosecuting, and that the details and application can be better acquired in connection with actual practice, and yet instead of shortening up her course of professional study, as other institutions have done which entertain the same views, she lengthens them out to nearly three times their former duration. She prescribes a course of study for females, a more extended course, too, than that required by the majority of female seminaries, and consents to give female students an examination and a diploma certifying their having passed, or passed with distinction, or passed with the highest distinction, the course prescribed, and yet she refuses to admit them formally as students or to confer upon them the degrees for which students strive. She recognizes their right to have an education and to have the rewards thereof, but she in a measure denies to them the opportunity of obtaining the one, and withholds the other from them.

This simultaneous conceding to, and withholding from, young women the rights of students, is the latest feat of the great University, and let us hope it will be the last of its kind. It savors so strongly of a shrinking from the carrying out of honest convictions, as to lower one's estimate if not lessen his respect for the institution. It looks not so much like true conservatism as like timidity. As a general rule expediency is nothing but timidity gone to seed, and this case of Harvard University is no exception.

A QUESTION OF JURISDICTION.

A legal friend, who has been examining the petition of our Senator now pending in the County Court, and the law applicable to the case, has handed us the following, which seems to be a pretty conclusive showing against the power of the court to grant the prayer of the petition:

Recognizing the fact that "it is cruelty to load a falling man," we nevertheless think that there are circumstances connected with the attempt of the person calling himself John H. Mitchell to obtain "a decree judicially declaring the legality of his name," which challenge investigation. If Mr. Hipple showed any signs of repentance or gave any evidence of contrition, he might be spared further notoriety, but as he evinces a disposition to bolster up his course by bravado, and to palliate when he should repent, we will attract the attention of the County Court to some of the peculiarities in the proceeding above mentioned.

There is no method known to the law in Oregon by which a person who has been acting under an assumed name can obtain a decree judicially declaring the assumed name to be legal. The only provision at all akin to the subject, is as follows: Application for change of names of persons may be heard and determined by the County Courts in the several counties." "Before decreeing a change of name * * * the Court shall require public notice of the application therefor to be given, that all persons may offer and show cause, if they have any, why the same should not be granted. The Court shall also require public notice to be given of the change decreed, and on return of proof thereof, may grant certificate under the seal of the Court of the name the party is to have, and which thereafter shall be his legal name."

The fact that the law was passed is evidence that it was necessary to have some mode recognized in law by which a person could change his name, and that it could not be done save by that method. Mr. Hipple, with his characteristic legal manner, argues that as he assumed a false name before there was any law whatever in Oregon allowing any change of name, that, therefore, he had a perfect right to do so. If he had such right, why does he want to have the name of Mitchell which he assumed declared legal?

We would like the County Court in its decree to refer to any authority for "declaring judicially the legality" of all assumed name.

We would also like to know what return the County Judge will make under the following section of the same act: "Each judge shall annually, in the month of December, make a return to the office of the Secretary of State of all changes of names made in the court under this title," etc. What change of name will he report in this instance?

What is the name which is now sought to be legalized? It is John H. Mitchell. Is that John Hipple Mitchell a John Hiram Mitchell?

The petition is signed John H. Mitchell and not Hipple and is an audacious attempt to have the past acts of the man endorsed instead of being a bona fide attempt to have his name changed in accordance with the statute. He has no right to assume that he has been correct in this matter all along and now wants it merely legalized to "satisfy the doubts which have arisen in the minds of some persons." Let him come in and sign his petition as John Mitchell Hipple and give the notice required and ask that his name be changed. And by the way the County Court has no right to give the notice which has been published in this instance by the County Judge. It has a right to require public notice of the application for a change of name to be given, which notice should be given by the party applying for the change with a designation of the name in full which he seeks to obtain.

Who has not heard of Rackerby—the Rackerby—William M. Rackerby? Since we have considered the query we do remember that Rackerby won national notoriety as one of the very few delegates from California to the Cincinnati Convention of 1872. We are reminded of cheerless William's existence by reading that he is now an independent candidate for District Attorney in Sutter county.

We are informed that one of the results of Sir Samuel Baker's expedition is the establishing of the fact that Lakes Tanganyika and Albert Nyanza are one and the same body of water. They constitute a magnificent inland sea 700 miles in length. It is further announced, says a London telegram, that vessels can be launched above the falls named after Sir Roderick Murchison, and sail to Ujiji. This intelligence is from a Whartoum correspondent who avers that he obtained it direct from the explorer's lips. Perhaps amid the million surprises that lurk along the pathway of modern civilization, the project of steam navigation on the waters of interior Africa is not the most improbable. We used to speak with wonderment of a modern railway in the land of the Cheops. Reuter's invasion of Persia is ominous of death to the cruel dynasty of Cyrus. But we think the vision of steam navigation in the desolate realm of the Kaffir summons us to the utmost tension of the imaginative faculty. Probably some shrewd Yankee will discover that there are immense fortunes in the enterprise. And why not?

The Yreka Journal is of the opinion that as Hooka Jim and Bogus Charlie are liable to go Scott-free as a reward for their treachery to their chief, it will not be safe for them to run loose in the Lost River country, if the feelings of the settlers in that neighborhood are rightly understood. They were, according to the evidence, the meanest and most treacherous of all the Modoc murderers, excepting, perhaps Boston Charley.

A full attendance of the members of the Committee is desired.

CITY.

NEW VAULT.—Some months ago the foundation for a new fire and burglar proof vault was laid to the rear of the First National Bank, for the safe deposit of moneys and valuable papers used in connection with that banking establishment. The foundation was constructed in the most massive and enduring manner. This foundation consists of stone cement and iron. It is 12 feet square, and is about the same height from the starting point up to where it meets the level of the floor in the room. [illegible] is used in the foundation, cemented firmly and indissolubly together with the best article of concrete. In addition, about one ton of nails that were gathered from the fire last [illegible], were mixed up in the concrete and sandwiched between the stones. The whole, now hardened by age and exposure, is as firm and unyielding as if composed of one solid stone. Fire would produce but a faint impression on this foundation, and burglars would stand aghast and disheartened before the task of [illegible] the vault through that flinty [illegible] of stone, iron and concrete. Upon this [illegible] platform will be built a vault of iron, equal in strength and massiveness to the foundation on which it rests. In dimensions the vault will be twelve feet square and about [illegible] feet high. This is the size on the outside. The walls of the vault are to be three feet thick, thus making it nine feet square and about ten high, in the clear. By the [illegible] Rival there arrived the iron of which the vault is to be built. Masons began work [illegible] day to tear down a portion of the brick wall that separates the room from the hall [illegible] through the building. The object of this is to afford sufficient room for the conveying together of the vault, and to also [illegible] subsequent [illegible] to the apartment that may be [illegible] after the safe is finished and ready for use. Mr. Wm. B. [illegible], of Cincinnati, arrived on the last [illegible] for the purpose of superintending the erection of this vault, the door and frame of which alone will weigh about three tons. On Monday the work of putting this impregnable [illegible] together will commence.

[illegible] CITY WOOLEN MILLS.—The Oregon City Woolen Mills were almost wholly destroyed by fire [illegible] winter. But notwithstanding the [illegible] event, this establishent, through the [illegible] energy and enterprise of the [illegible], is again ready for active operation, and a portion of the machinery will [illegible] be running to-day. The factory in [illegible] departments is superior in all respects to the one consumed by the destroyer. We are indebted to the Enterprise for a description of the mill: There are six sets of cards, of the [illegible] improved make by Davis & [illegible], [illegible] jacks, with 288 spindles each, all of [illegible] of the new style self-operating [illegible]. These jacks perform all the [illegible] of the old hand jacks without any [illegible] than a person to tie the occasional [illegible] of threads, and the work thus [illegible] must necessarily be better, [illegible] as every draw is made with the [illegible] of the nicest machinery, and [illegible] more accurate [illegible] possibly be performed by hand. [illegible] up with 24 broad fancy looms, of [illegible] & Cam's make, all of which are [illegible] the old style. In the lower [illegible] are five gigs, one narrow and one [illegible] of which are fine and very [illegible]; also, steam brush, measuring, falling mills, washer, dryer, [illegible] rooms are also filled with [illegible] machinery, besides that mentioned [illegible] dressers, twisters, and [illegible] to make up a complete [illegible] of this description. The [illegible] room, which was formerly [illegible] now outside in a [illegible] special purpose, and [illegible] adapted for such [illegible] room given by the [illegible] story higher than the former [illegible] to the convenience of [illegible] business, and it is fully [illegible] the improved machinery, [illegible] will be able to increase their [illegible] any previous year.

A LIVELY BAND OF CATTLE.—On Thursday [illegible] herd of cattle from up the [illegible] the eastside depot. They were [illegible] to the tender mercies [illegible] butcher. After the [illegible] several succeeding [illegible] from the band and took to the [illegible] to the opposite side. Three [illegible] ashore on the [illegible] driven to the band by [illegible] Holmes, officers of the Her-[illegible] to corral them, one fellow [illegible], who tried to escape being gored, [illegible] into the river, and the steer made off [illegible] precincts of East Portland, en [illegible] career Mr. Robert E. Bybee [illegible] hunting a "terminus" probably [illegible] Robert made haste in consequence to [illegible] the infuriated animal just in time to save a portion of a valuable [illegible] still hanging about the vicinity of Mr. Bybee's residence at last accounts. It may be as well to state that Mr. [illegible], who took to the water to save himself [illegible] got out safely, and that the [illegible] of the cattle aforesaid were [illegible] safely to this city.

NEW ENGINE HOUSE.—The work on the new engine house for Tiger, No. 5, has so far progressed that sealed proposals for contracts for printing the [illegible] have been advertised. Several months ago the foundation was laid and work on the new structure commenced. This building is [illegible] of wood, and is two stories high. Its dimensions are about 55x27 feet. The lower story will consist of one [illegible] of the engine. Its [illegible]. The second story will [illegible] meeting room, 24x30 [illegible] a room immediately to the rear of this for the depositing of property belonging to the company. This room will be 15.6x20.3. [illegible] way 5 feet wide and 20 feet and 3 inches [illegible] through the rear portion of the [illegible] story, into which the stairway from the [illegible] story will open. This new engine house will stand on Fourth street, between Mill and Montgomery. In a few days the contract for the painting and [illegible] of the building will be let. Although the contract does not call for the completion of the building before the 1st of September, it will in all probability be finished before that time and ready for the reception of the engine.

[illegible] FOR BUSINESS.—A letter was received in this city yesterday from one of the principal real estate agents of Portland. The letter [illegible] written from Tacoma, and is simply headed, "The Terminus." Some days before the [illegible] designated by the Directors, the [illegible] went over to Tacoma to wait for the [illegible] of the tide. While there, the news came [illegible] that Tacoma was chief among her [illegible]. Our irrepressible real estate agent, who by the way is the owner of a considerable [illegible] of land in and around the terminus, [illegible] rolled up his sleeves and proceeded to "biz" within a few hours after the receipt of the gratifying intelligence. In the letter he [illegible]: "I have opened an office here in Tacoma. I have stuck out my shingle, elaborately lettered with a marking brush. With considerable difficulty I have also obtained a table [illegible] cost me the neat sum of 50 cents. The [illegible] only requires to be covered with silk velvet, or something of that kind, to be very [illegible]. In addition I have borrowed a chair, [illegible] a bottle of ink, borrowed a pen, and am now ready for business." That agent will do well if he only perseveres.

OUT TO LOCATE.—Many weeks ago the County Commissioners donated a piece of land [illegible] the Poor Farm, on which was to be located the pest house. This piece of land was [illegible]. As this would necessitate the [illegible] of the pest house from its present location, Chief Lappeus, accompanied by the [illegible] and Clerk, visited the Poor Farm yesterday to view the "lay of the land," and to [illegible] a site to which the pest house is to be removed. We learn that the character of the [illegible] set apart for the purpose is such as not to strike one very favorably. As yet the precise [illegible] of the pest house has not been selected.

COUNTY TREASURER'S OFFICE.—From the annual report of the County Treasurer for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1873, now on file in the County Clerk's office, we subtract the following: Balance in the County Fund June [illegible] 1873, $[illegible] 61, coin; currency, $582 70. [illegible] in the School Fund, same date, $12,-[illegible] coin; currency, $315 20. Amount in the [illegible] Fund, $30. Cash in the Treasury June 30, 1873, $16,936 19, coin; currency, $895 90.

WANDERED AWAY.—Yesterday afternoon a little child aged about two years, wandered from the residence of its parents, corner of Jefferson and Seventh streets, and for several hours was lost to sight. The mother in a distracted mood sought eagerly but in vain for her offspring. Runners were despatched in all directions but no tidings of the little wanderer could be gained. An hour's search and inquiry at length brought the truant to light. The child was found to the great joy of the parents in front of the American Exchange Hotel, having walked that long distance unaided and alone. When found the little fellow was gazing with great interest at the Indians who were lounging listlessly in front of the hotel.

TERMINUS-WARD.—Speaking of the exodus of Portland people Tacoma-ward the Olympia Tribune of the 17th says: "No less than four stages arrived last evening, all crowded with passengers from Portland. Mr. Coggan's six-horse mail coach was crammed inside and bristled outside with legs and heads, the owners of which looked as if they were holding on with their teeth and toe-nails. From the stages these loads of eager terminus-hunters went immediately on board the steamer to take passage for Tacoma. There is plenty of room for them there—under the canopy of heaven. What is left of Portland will come in other stages.

ANNUAL REPORT.—The annual exhibit of the financial condition of Multnomah county for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1873, was filed in the County Clerk's office yesterday. From the exhibit we obtain the following: Amount in the Treasury as per report, July 1st, 1872, $38,670 74, received from all sources during the year, $114,382 03. Total, $153,052 77. Paid from county fund, $68,059 44; from school fund, $13,039 63; from State tax, $44,-111 33; from poll tax fund, $1,345; from building fund, $8,665 27. Total, $135,220 68. Balance in the Treasury, $17,832 09.

RELEASED.—Patsy Foy and Edward Kennedy, the parties who were engaged in the shooting affair down on Front street, were both released last evening on the payment of $25 each. The Police Judge being absent from his post of duty, and no State complaint having been entered against these worthies they were fined the above sum for creating a disturbance on the streets and allowed to go at large.

CAME OVER.—The brig Orient and bark Free Trade crossed the bar on Thursday and arrived at Astoria. Both vessels came in ballast. The former will load with lumber at Cementville, and the latter with bolts at Cathlamet. These vessels are both destined for San Francisco.

ANKENY'S NEW HALL.—This evening Ankeny's Hall, in the second story of the Central Market, will be formerly thrown open to the public. The Hall has been quite tastily decorated expressly for the occasion, and a band of music engaged to play during the evening.

FOUND GUILTY.—Claudio Gonzales, indicted for disposing of liquor to an Indian, was tried in the U. S. District Court on Thursday. The jury returned a verdict of guilty. Yesterday his attorney filed a motion in arrest of judgment and for a new trial.

DUE HERE.—The schooner Oregonian, from San Francisco, sailed some days ago bound for Portland. Although due here, nothing whatever has been seen of her off the bar at last accounts.

WILL BE SENTENCED.—In the U. S. District Court to-day, Walter S. Kitchen, indicted and convicted for the robbery of the United States mails, will be called for sentence.

RE-ESTABLISHED.—Zan Bros., manufacturers of brooms, have resumed business at 49 Front street, opposite their old stand.

BASE BALL.

No Base Ball games of any prominence in this vicinity to-day.

July 7th, at Philadelphia—Athletic 16, Atlantic 7. At New York—Philadelphias 13, Mutual 10.

Forty-one games were played by nine clubs which are contesting for the championship of the States, in the past month.

The White Stockings of Philadelphia head the list, the Boston second, Athletic third, and Mutual seventh in the championship arena.

Olympia boasts of a Club that can beat any nine [illegible] who handle the willow in the State of Oregon. What have the Pioneers, College, Pacific and Clackamas Clubs, to say to this?

The Pacific B. B. C. is doing, or being done by the Forest City Club at Yamhill's chief center—Lafayette. When the boys return, they will have some tall stories to tell. At all events, we want them to bring back a ball.

And now the Enterprise says it was the second nine of the Clackamas Club that came down to play the Pioneers. To what nine, Mr. Enterprise, do the Warrens, Pope, Pratt and Harding belong? The Club is fattening up for the fall campaign—so says the above paper.

"The prints of this city are talking of challenging the Portland prints to play a friendly game of ball, there being a 'nine' in this burg." This is from the Oregon City Enterprise. We don't think there are nine "prints" there, and if there were, they couldn't get away with a nine we could produce.

Hon. Geo. H. Williams, together with other Cabinet officials, attended Philadelphia's Fourth of July ceremonies.

Hon. J. C. Avery, of Corvallis, is in the city. We acknowledge the pleasure of a call from him last evening.

Tilmon Ford, Esq., of Salem, Grand Worthy Chief Templar of the Grand Lodge of Oregon, gave us a call last evening.

We regret to announce that the wife of Mr Harry Edwards, the talented and favorite actor of San Francisco, is lying quite ill at the St. Charles Hotel. Accompanied by his accomplished wife, Mr. Edwards arrived in our city about a week ago, on a health and pleasure trip; also to travel over the country and view some of our wonderful scenery. After a few weeks' pleasant sojourn here, he intended to return to his home in San Francisco, via Victoria, recuperated in mind and body. But the day following his arrival his wife was taken ill, and has not been able to leave her room since. Ere he shall return we hope he will favor our public with some of his rare elocutionary powers.

ESTABLISHING A MUSEUM.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

I read with pleasure an article in your issue of this morning with reference to the formation of a Museum of the natural productions of Oregon. It may not be out of place for me to express my hope that such an enterprise may be carried forward to its most perfect accomplishment, and to offer in any way possible to me, my fullest assistance to so desirable an end. As a life-long student of natural history, I have amassed one of the largest private collections of insects in America, consisting of nearly 200,000 specimens, and am consequently fully aware of the great interest which exists among my coadjutors all over the world with reference to the species of the Pacific coast. Many of the known forms of Oregon insects are yet undescribed, and therefore new to science, while the numerous species which yet exist which have not yet gratified the sight of any entomologist, will furnish food for collections for many years to come. As with insects, so with other branches of natural history, and the foundation of a local museum which shall embrace the products of your State, will be hailed with delight by naturalists over the whole of America. My present visit to Oregon has been made partly with a view of investigating some of the species of butterflies which inhabit this district, to illustrate a work which I hope shortly to publish on the "Butterflies of California, Oregon and the Pacific coast generally, west of the Rocky Mountains." This plan has, I regret to say, been set aside for the present by the serious illness of my wife, but I hope yet before my return to California, to collect many facts of interest to me. With reference to the future, I most cheerfully promise to name any species of Oregon insects which may be sent to me, and to indicate their position in classification, and I am sure I can promise the same assistance with regard to plants from my friends Professor Bolander and Dr. Kellogg, and to the shells from Mr. R. E. C. Stearns. I should also be happy to offer any hints with reference to the modes of collecting and preserving specimens, and during my brief stay in your city, willingly place my experience in such matters at the command of any interested persons.

I am, sir, yours faithfully,
HARRY EDWARDS.
ST. CHARLES HOTEL, Portland, July 18, 1873.

Why linger in blissful ignorance? Why do you wander about seeking a place where they keep the largest and finest stock of Summer Clothing? Why pay high prices for goods when the fact has been long established that the great firm of J. KOHN & Co., 91 Front Street, sell Clothing and Gents' Furnishing Goods so cheap? They keep the best, they sell the cheapest, and what more can be asked?

The only unfailing specific for diseases of the kidneys, bladder, and the organs affected by vicious habits, is Helmbold's Extract Buchu. This medicine cures. Dr. Helmbold is the only physicians who has succeeded in obtaining the full virtues of Buchu. His is the original and only truly valuable preparation. It is confided in by physicians and patients alike. It is important that sufferers should obtain the genuine. Therefore ask for Helmbold's Extract Buchu, with the Doctor's signature on the bottle.

A fact worth remembering—Five cents' worth of Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders, given to a horse twice a week will save double that amount in grain, and the horse will be fatter, sleeker, and every way worth more money than though he did not have them.

Three thousand shares belong to the Company, and will be offered for sale by us, the entire proceeds of which will go into the Treasury.

The first one thousand shares will be offered at $120 per share, UNITED STATES CURRENCY, or at the rate of 75 cents per acre. Every share will also be received at its par value of $240 in payment for land, as soon as the appraisals are made. Such share will then be cancelled, and not reissued, and a deed given to the purchaser.

The land will be appraised at moderate rates, in accordance with its actual value, as soon as practicable, in sections of 640 acres, and at not less than $1 50 per acre, U. S. CURRENCY, and offered for sale. Actual settlers, however, always having preference.

We refer, as to the character of this magnificent grant of land, to CLARENCE KING, Esq., the U. S. Geologist for this coast, who is familiar with it from personal observation; also to the elaborate report of the Hon. B. J. Pengra, late Surveyor General of Oregon, on this road and lands, from which we quote: "There is but very little of the entire grant but what is valuable for either Farming, Grazing or Timbering purposes."

As shares are cancelled, the average of acres to the remaining shares will naturally increase, and from cash sales dividends will be declared.

IMMIGRANTS,

BY BUYING THESE SHARES, CAN SECURE GOOD LANDS, WITH A PERFECT TITLE, AT LESS THAN GOVERNMENT RATES.

For Custodians of Trust Funds, the shares of the PACIFIC LAND COMPANY combine absolute security, based on the lands, with promise of large returns; and no investment can be better for CHILDREN, as the value of the property must increase immensely in a few years.

Remittances for shares can be sent to us by Wells, Fargo & Co., or in registered letters.

Full particulars, maps and a descriptive pamphlet can be obtained at our office, where the subscription book for the shares is now open.

A SONG FOR PEACE.

As a tale that is told, as a vision,
Forgive and forget; for I say
That the truth shall outdate the derision
Of the false till the fall of the day.

Ay, forgive as you would be forgiven,
Ay, forget, lest the ill you have done
Be remembered against you in Heaven
And all the days under the sun.

For who shall have bread without labor?
And who shall have rest without price?
And who shall hold war with his neighbor
With promise of peace with the Christ?

The years may lay hand on fair Heaven,
May place and displace the red stars,
May stain them as blood stains are driven
At sunset in beautiful bars.

May shroud them in black till they fret us
As clouds with their showers of tears,
May grind us to dust and forget us,
May the years, O, the pitiless years!

The precepts of Christ are beyond them,
The truths by the Nazarene taught,
With the tramp of the ages upon them,
They endure as though ages were naught;

The deserts may drink up the fountains,
The forests give place to the plain,
The main may give place to the mountains,
The mountains return to the main,

Mutations of worlds and mutations
Of suns may take place, but the reign
Of Time and the toils and vexations
Bequeath them, no, never a stain.

Go forth to the fields as one sowing,
Sing songs and be glad as you go,
There are seeds that take root without sowing,
And bear some fruit whether or no.

And the sun shall shine, sooner or later,
Tho' the midnight breaks ground on the morn.
Then appeal you to Christ, the Creator,
And to gray-bearded Time, His first-born.

BURR IN COURT.

THE TRIAL FOR MURDER—THE PERJURED WITNESS—HOW HE WAS CAUGHT BY BURR—A THRILLING SCENE—THEODOSIA AND HER FATHER—BURR SHOOTING AT A TARGET.

[From Proctor's Bench and Bar.]

In the autumn of the year 1818, a court held its sittings at Utica, N. Y., which was largely attended by legal gentleman from various parts of the State. As the second day of the term was drawing to a close, a gentlemen, whose appearance indicated that he had just arrived in town, entered the court-room, and, walking directly to the bar, seated himself among the lawyers. There was something in his appearance that attracted attention. The most casual observer could not fail to detect in his bearing a natural ease, and undefinable superiority which so silently, yet truthfully, evinces familiarity with refined society. He had apparently numbered fifty years, and yet time had "lightly pressed his signet seal" upon him, for much of the vivacity of youth still lingered on his visage. His hair had begun to turn gray, and at the side of his head was slightly bushy, but worn back from his face and temples left his broad, high forehead quite bare, giving a classic cast to his features. His cheek was pale and thin, his brow thoughtful and tinged with the shadow of care, perhaps of sorrow, while his black, brilliant and singularly fascinating eye lighted up and animated a face once seen could never be forgotten. He was below the ordinary stature, and his frame was somewhat slender, though well knit and fair proportioned. Finally, the tout ensemble was that of a gentleman—a man of intellect, acquainted with the world, with men, and, withal, a penetrating judge of character.

As he entered the bar, Martin Van Buren was in the act of closing an argument that had occupied the attention of the court for several hours. Turning to take his seat, he recognized the stranger who was near him.

"Colonel Burr!" said Van Buren in a low voice, extending his hand, "I am very glad to see you. Our cause was reached this morning, but as I could not think of defaulting you in your absence, which I believed to be unavoidable, I exchanged our case with the one just submitted. I hope, Colonel, you are well."

"Quite well, I thank you; I am obliged for this courtesy. I did not leave New York quite as soon as I expected, and it is a long way [illegible]. Madame Justice is getting mercurial, I fancy, since she is establishing her temples so far in the interior of our State. But I suppose our case is the next one to be tried."

"No, Colonel, I am sorry to say that there is a preferred cause of some kind that is to be disposed of next." At this period in the conversation the voice of the crier announced the adjournment of court until the next morning, and the two lawyers left the Court-house together.

The reader is already aware that the stranger who has been described was Aaron Burr—a name conspicuous in American history. His fall from greatness, his pecuniary misfortunes—had compelled him to resume the practice of a profession in which he had few, if any, rivals, and which had been to him a stepping-stone to the highest honors.

He was at Utica on this occasion as the opponent of Martin Van Buren in one of those great ejectment suits, which in the early history of the State occupied so much of the attention of its courts. Van Buren at this time was one of the ablest lawyers of the bar—a State Senator and politician of rare political abilities, skilled in the art of managing the inclination and prejudices of the people, wielding an influence which rendered him a powerful, if not successful, rival of DeWitt Clinton.

Colonel Burr was at this time unknown in the politics of the State and nation, though he had occupied a seat in the Senate of the United States, and had contended with Jefferson for the Presidential chair of the nation, missing the great prize by two or three votes, and winning the Vice-Presidency with little opposition. He was now merely the lawyer. A few years after his admission to the bar he removed from Albany to New York city, where he became a successful, though friendly rival of Alexander [illegible] each of these great men had a high, if not an exalted, opinion of the other's talents. To the strength and facility of Hamilton's imaginations, his fine rhetorical powers, his occasional flashes of poetical genius, his acute reasoning powers, and the force of his declamation, Burr paid the tribute of his admiration. The latter valued himself little upon his oratorical powers. His pleading at the bar were more in the style of conversation than oratory—the conversation of an enlightened, well educated, thoroughly disciplined lawyer. In replying to Hamilton's splendid legal speeches, he would select the vulnerable, yet vital points, and quietly demolish them, leaving all the other points untouched. In a twenty-minute speech he has been known to completely neutralize the effects of one of Hamilton's long, elaborate and ornate addresses.

Hamilton and Burr were occasionally associated in the trial of a case. On such occasions they were almost irresistible. It is related that on one occasion they were retained to defend a man indicted for murder, and who was generally believed to be guilty, though the circumstances under which the crime was committed rendered it a deeply interesting case of circumstantial evidence. During the progress of the trial, as the circumstances were developed, suspicion began to attach to the principal witness against the prisoner. Burr and Hamilton brought all their skill in cross-examination to bear on the witness, in the hope of dragging out of him his dreadful secret. But with singular sagacity and coolness he eluded their efforts, though they succeeded in darkening the shadows of suspicion that fell upon him, and strengthening their convictions of their client's innocence.

Before the cross-examination of the witness was concluded, the court adjourned for tea.

"I believe our client is not guilty, but I have no doubt that Brigham, that cunning witness, is really the guilty man; but he is so shrewd, cool and deep that I am fearful his testimony will hang poor Blair, our client, in spite of all we can do," said Hamilton to Burr, while on their way from the court-house to the hotel.

"I agree with you that Blair is not guilty, and Brigham is, and I believe we can catch him. I have a plan that will detect him, if I am not wonderfully mistaken," said Burr. He then proceeded to explain to his associate, the nature of his plan.

"You may succeed," said Hamilton, after listening to the plan. "It's worth trying, at any rate, though you have a man of iron to deal with."

Colonel Burr was compelled to remain at Utica for several days. During his stay he divested himself of that reticent and coldness which usually characterized his intercourse with strangers, and became a general favorite with the members of the bar who were present.

One afternoon a number of young lawyers amused themselves by shooting at a target with pistols. As the exercises continued long after the adjournment of court for the day, many lawyers and others who were attending court assembled to witness the sport. Among the deeply interested spectators was Colonel Burr. While keenly watching the effect of each shot, two young lawyers who had been engaged in shooting, approached him.

"Col. Burr," said one of them, "we should be very happy to witness your skill at target-shooting."

"My skill at target shooting? How came you to suppose I had any skill as a marksman?" said Burr, fixing his piercing eye upon the speaker.

"You are an old soldier, Col. Burr, and we have always heard you spoken of as the best shot in America," said the young man.

"It is many years since I was a soldier, and I have had but little practice with the pistol since leaving the army. Times of peace do not, or at least they should not, furnish many occasions for the use of that weapon, since those occasions often have a lasting regret. But as your invitation to join your sport was so respectfully given, I will accept it. At least, I shall shoot once at the target. That will be sufficient for my unpracticed hand. Let me see your pistols."

Several were brought him. Selecting one of them, he balanced it a moment in his hand, sighted across the barrel; then, taking his stand at the line from which each contestant fired, he raised his arm and presented the pistol.

It was a moment of intense, almost dramatic, interest. Before the spectators, pistol in hand, stood Aaron Burr—the very arm outstretched which, on the heights of Weehawken, laid the illustrious Hamilton cold in death. The eye that was now sighting the pistol had gleamed along a deathful weapon in mortal combat—had beheld his foe sink at his feet, bathed in blood. But a quick flash—a sharp report broke the spell that held the spectators—the bullet had sped. Aaron Burr had sent it home to the target. A faint smile passed over his features as an exclamation of astonishment announced the unerring shot. Handing the weapon to its owner, he turned and left the field without uttering a word.

After tea, Burr ordered the Sheriff to provide an extra number of lights for the evening session, and to arrange them so that their rays would converge against the pillar in the court room near the place occupied by the witness.

The evening session opened, and Burr resumed the cross-examination of the witness. It was a test of the profound skill and subtlety of the lawyer—the self possession, courage and tact of the witness, standing on the very brink of a horrid gulf, calmly and intrepidly resisting the efforts of the terrible man before him to push him over. At last, after dexterously leading the witness to the appropriate point, Burr suddenly seized a lamp in each hand, and holding them in such a manner that their light fell instantaneously upon the face of the witness, he exclaimed in a startling voice, like the voice of the avenger of blood, "Gentlemen of the jury, behold the murderer!"

With a wild, convulsive start—a face of ashy pallor—eyes starting from their sockets—lips apart, his whole attitude evincing terror, the man sprang from his chair. For a moment he stood motionless, struggling to regain his self-possession. But it was only a momentary struggle; the terrible words of the advocate "shivered along his arteries," shaking every nerve with palsying fear. Conscious that the eyes of all in the court room were fixed upon him, reading the hidden deeds of his life, he left the witness stand and walked shrinkingly to the door of the court room. But he was prevented from making his escape by the Sheriff. This scene, so thrilling and startling, may perhaps be imagined, though it cannot be described. Like the fall of David Deans, in the court room, before judges, jurors, and lawyers, when the doom of Effie, his youngest daughter, was pronounced by the testimony of her elder sister, Jennie Deans, it struck the spectators with silent awe; changing the whole aspect of the trial, overthrowing in an instant the hypothesis which the Attorney General was confident would send his prisoner to the gallows—saving an innocent man from the deathful hands of a skillful perjurer.

The false witness was arrested, two indictments found against him, one for murder, another for perjury. He was acquitted on his trial for murder, but subsequently convicted of perjury and sentenced to a long imprisonment.

The high-toned liberality and generosity with which Hamilton and Burr conducted the contests of the bar created no bitterness or animosity. They continued friends until they became great partisan leaders—until the polluting influences of politics—their collision as rival statesmen, created that relentless antagonism which culminated in the tragic scene when Hamilton fell by the hand of Burr, in the most famous duel in history—a duel which doomed its survivor to obloquy and reproach which he never outlived, and which, with the alleged treason for which he was tried and acquitted in 1807, ostracised him from his rank among great men of the nation.

At the time Burr is introduced to the reader he has long drank of the Marah of the waters of disappointment and sorrow—had long labored at the task of Sisyphus—the mountain and rock.

It was Theodosia, his daughter, so lovely, so pure, so intellectual, so haughty, and yet so soft and gentle, that opened to Aaron Burr the brightest page in this blotted volume of his life. "She was nearly a complete realization of his ideal of a woman." Upon her he lavished the wealth of a soul that overflowed with tenderness. Long after his fall from power she was the solitary star shining in beautiful luster over the darkened and rough pathway of his life.

During his trial for high treason, at Richmond, in 1807, Theodosia, then the brilliant leader of society in the most aristocratic city of the South—the wife of Joseph Alston, a distinguished citizen of South Carolina—by her devotion and influence powerfully aided her father's defense. In the darkest hour of that memorable legal drama she evinced her deep affliction in language as heroic as it was beautiful. "My vanity," said she, "would be greater if I had not been placed so near you; and yet, my pride is our relationship. I had rather not live than not be the daughter of such a man."

A few years after the Richmond trial, which resulted in a victory for Burr, Theodosia met a fate which is still enveloped in gloom and mystery. At the close of the year 1812 she sailed from Charleston in a vessel bound for New York, for the purpose of visiting her father. Her husband was then Governor of South Carolina. Though he provided everything conducive to her safety and comfort which wealth and influence could command, the vessel never reached its destination; was never heard of after leaving Charleston harbor. At last all hope ended; the certainty that Theodosia was dead came home to them, and Aaron Burr was bereaved as few have ever been bereaved—left to "a life all winter, war within himself to wage." Still, the properties of a mind stern, uncomplaining and calm, a profound, scheming, subtle and powerful intellect sustained him; and while the musings of his solitude became a votive offering to the dead—a rightful homage to their memory—he retained superiority among men and brilliancy at the bar. He was endowed by nature with the power of gaining ascendency over those with whom he was brought into contact. Whenever he desired to please he could exercise blandishments which none but Aaron Burr ever possessed. Then he had attractions for all: smiles for the silent, deep attention for the loquacious, badinage for the gay, sentiment for the grave, and romance for the young.

The famous London auctioneer, whose advertisement stated that the only drawback on a certain country place which he had for sale were the "noise of the nightingale, and the litter of the rose leaves," was the right sort of a man for his profession. But the New York auctioneers go ahead of him. The following extract from one of their advertisements shows how they do up things. He says the sale will come off "On the premises. This will be one of the grand suburban chefs d'oeuvre of the season:"

"Poets may sing of some magical, fairy land,
'Mid grottoes, and rimpling rill.
But a real cozy home by a practical ocean strand,
Near steamer and railroads more beautiful still.

"'Neath the clustering grape and the apple tree o'er you,
From a calm, peaceful home you serenely look down,
While the world's busy commerce is passing before you,
On the din, and the turmoil, and dust of the town.

"A limited number of tickets will be issued to those who really desire to purchase this magnificent water front property, commanding the finest and most extended view of Long Island Sound. The choicest plots have not yet been offered, and will be sold, according to Mr. Blackwell's invariable custom, without reserve. Gratulla's famous band will discourse eloquent music on water and land. Superb banquet under colossal tent. Harrison, the great improvisatore. Personal application must be made at office of auctioneer."

The journals of Milan state that Signor Verdi has informed the municipal authorities of that city of his intention to write a funeral mass in honor of Alessandro Manzoni, to be performed on the first anniversary of his death. Signor Verdi will himself direct the rehearsals and conduct the performance.

Wheat in Liverpool: Average California, 12s 8d; [illegible] Club, 12s 5d@12s 10d.

We are still hopeful that the commercial interests of the country at large will not be depressed by the stringent condition of the money market which was universal throughout the United States last year, notwithstanding the fact that prophets of evil have not been wanting who predict a scarcity of money with the fair inauguration of the fall trade.

An exchange of the 3d instant from Chicago says: "The money market is well supplied with loanable funds on good negotiable paper. There is a much larger amount of currency coming into the city from the Northwest than is going into the country. Business moves rather slowly as the national holiday approaches, but the season of general relaxation is upon us, and the current of financial affairs seems comparatively untroubled, and now we are ready to discuss the autumn prospects of trade and commerce. The promise that we shall have good crops is favorable. California is in the midst of a grand wheat harvest, nearly equal to the best she ever gathered in. The apparently unequal distribution of rain over our wheat growing areas rather disturbs the hopefulness of some, yet on the whole the general conclusion is that we shall harvest an average crop. But the best aspect of our commercial heavens is in the fact that the last six or eight months our exports have been steadily and with accelerated power gaining on our imports, giving every assurance of a safe and profitable autumn trade for the entire country."

Pacific Coast Produce in England.

The similarity of climate in British Columbia and Oregon, together with the superiority of our soil, justifies the assumption that our productions rank as high in the market of England as those of that province. The following, from the Victoria Colonist of the 15th, gives a good idea of the estimation in which the produce from British Columbia is held. The Colonist says:

The following circular, addressed to the Provincial Secretary of British Columbia, is valuable, as showing the quality of the cereal produce of the province:

LONDON, Eng., 9th June, 1873.

SIR: I have received from you a case of cereals and peas, in small packages, certified under the hand of the Hon. Charles Good to contain ordinary samples of British Columbian field produce. They have been submitted for valuation to a highly respectable firm of corn agents in Mark Lane, and I now inclose a copy of their report, which is generally to the following effect:

The wheat, if here now, would sell at 62s to 73s for 496 lbs ex granary, being 1s to 2s above the value of Californian of average quality.

The oats are also very fine, and if here now would fetch 30s for 336 lbs ex-ship. They compare very favorably with the best Scotch, which command the highest price in this market.

The barley is of fine quality, and if it had arrived here in time for the malting season (say not later than March) would have sold at 46s to 50s for 448 lbs ex-ship. It is equal to the best English, and is worth about 10s ⅌ quarter more than the Eastern Canada barley for feeding, which is the only Canadian barley imported.

The peas (which are "black eye"), if in hard condition, would sell at 46s to 48s for 504 lbs ex granary. They are equal to the best that come to this market, and are about 10s a quarter better than the average imported from Eastern Canada.

These valuations are given on the basis of this year's prices of grain, which are higher than the average of most years. They are given also on the supposition that the articles arrive here in good condition, which, in the case of all descriptions of grain, is very important.

The hops are very good, and are worth fully 5d ⅌ lb more than the best East Canada hops.

From the Mark Lane Express of June 23d we learn that the arrivals off the coast during the ten days preceding numbered 15 cargoes, of which 15 cargoes were wheat, 17 maize, 8 barley, 3 beans, 1 rye, and 1 dari. The same paper reports the sales of 20 cargoes Californian wheat at 56s 9d@63s; Oregon, 62s; spring American, 58s 6d to 58s 6d.

Home Produce Market.

WHEAT—Some lots are coming to hand, but mostly of that purchased prior to arrival, to load the vessels now in port. Quotations are rather weaker at $1 50 ⅌ cental, though we hear of no purchases at a lower figure.

FLOUR—We quote the market steady at $5 ⅌ bbl. for standard extra; outside brands, $1 25@4 75; fine, $4; superfine, $3 75.

OATS—The trade has been rather more active during the latter half of the week, but prices only remain steady at 45c ⅌ bushel.

BARLEY—Market moderately well supplied at $1 45 ⅌ hundred pounds, the only present demand being for local consumption.

HAY—The receipts continue liberal, and with a limited demand prices are weak at $12@13 ⅌ ton for good timothy.

POTATOES—The receipts of the new crop have been quite adequate to supply the demand, and prices have declined to 70c ⅌ bushel.

BUTTER—We note some decrease in receipts during the past few days, but stocks in hand are fully sufficient to meet the wants of the trade. We quote good to best at 18@25c ⅌ lb; common, 15@18c.

EGGS—The market is hardly so abundantly supplied, and offers are made at 21@22c ⅌ dozen.

BACON—The local trade is abundantly supplied, and the export demand is dull; consequently we are unable to note any improvement in prices. Good country cured Hams are firm at 13@14½c ⅌ lb. Sides, 10@11½c; Shoulders, 8@9c. Trade is inactive.

CHICKENS—The market is well supplied with spring Chickens, and prices have been down to $1 75 ⅌ dozen during the week. We quote to-day at $3 for average lots. Grown Hens and Roosters in better demand at $4@4 50 ⅌ dozen.

HIDES—Much activity is realized in the market, and buyers are freely offering at current rates, which are furnished at 6@7c ⅌ lb for green, 7@8c for green salted, and 14@15c for dry. Shipments continue large.

WOOL—We note no important transactions to-day, though the aggregate receipts of the week have been quite large—a greater proportion coming from Eastern Oregon. Of course the prices paid depend on the quality, some lots being difficult sale at 18@20c, while others are freely taken at 22@25c ⅌ lb.

Puget Sound Shipping.

Three large vessels are lying at Utsalady loading with lumber and spars, one to go to Peru, one to Australia, and the other to San Francisco.

The bark Dublin arrived at Seabeck on the 12th inst. Ship Marmion arrived from Port Madison on the 13th inst. Ship Nicholas Bidder sailed from Pt. Blakely on the 14th inst. The Forest Queen arrived at Port Townsend on the 15th inst.

The ship James Cheston (Captain Wallace), arrived at Port Gamble, and reports having fallen in with the brigantine Queen Emma, of San Francisco in latitude 7° north and longitude 1?5 west, with a cargo of coffee from Ecuador, with the crew in a state of starvation. The people had been on short allowance for twenty-two days, and for five days previous to meeting the Cheston they had subsisted on rats and birds. A schooner was in company and in almost as bad a condition as the Queen, having divided supplies with her until the stock of both had been exhausted. Capt. Wallace supplied the wants of both. He estimates that it would take five days to carry them to San Francisco, with favorable weather.

SATURDAY MORNING, JULY 19 1873

A SONG FOR PEACE

As a tale that is told, as a vision,
Forgive and forget for I say
That the truth shall endure the derision
Of the false till the full of the day

Ay, forgive as you would be forgiven
Ay, forget lest the ill you have done
Be remembered against you in Heaven
And all the days under the sun

For who shall have bread without labor?
And who shall have rest without price?
And who shall hold war with his neighbor
With promise of peace with the Christ

The years may lay hand on fair Heaven
May place and displace the stars
May stain them as blood stains are driven
At sunset in beautiful bars

May shroud them in black till they fret us
As clouds with their showers of tears
May grind us to dust and forget us
May the years, O, the pitiless years!

The precepts of Christ are beyond them,
The truths by the Nazarene taught,
With the tramp of the ages upon them,
They endure as though ages were naught,

The deserts may drink up the fountains,
The forests give place to the plain,
The main may give place to the mountains,
The mountains return to the main,

Mutations of worlds and mutations
Of suns may take place but the reign
Of Time and the toils and vexations
Bequeath them, no never a stain

Go forth to the fields as one sowing,
Sing songs and be glad as you go
There are seeds that take root without sowing,
And bear some fruit whether or no

And the sun shall shine, sooner or later
Tho' the midnight breaks ground on the morn
Then appeal you to Christ the Creator
And to gray-bearded Time, His first-born

BURR IN COURT.

THE TRIAL FOR MURDER—THE PERJURED WITNESS—HOW HE WAS CAUGHT BY BURR—A THRILLING SCENE—THEODOSIA AND HER FATHER—BURR SHOOTING AT A TARGET.

[From Proctor's Bench and Bar.]

In the autumn of the year 1818, a court held its sittings at Utica, N. Y., which was largely attended by legal gentleman from various parts of the State. As the second day of the term was drawing to a close, a gentlemen, whose appearance indicated that he had just arrived in town, entered the court-room, and, walking directly to the bar, seated himself among the lawyers. There was something in his appearance that attracted attention The most casual observer could not fail to detect in his bearing a natural ease, and undefinable superiority which so silently, yet truthfully, evinces familiarity with refined society He had apparently numbered fifty years, and yet time had "lightly pressed his signet seal" upon him, for much of the vivacity of youth still lingered on his visage. His hair had begun to turn gray, and at the side of his head was slightly bushy, but worn back from his face and temples left his broad, high forehead quite bare, giving a classic cast to his features. His cheek was pale and thin, his brow thoughtful and tinged with the shadow of care, perhaps of sorrow, while his dark, brilliant and singularly fascinating eye lighted up and animated a face once seen could never be forgotten. He was below the ordinary stature, and his frame was somewhat slender, though well knit and fair proportioned Finally, the tout ensemble was that of a gentleman—a man of intellect, acquainted with the world, with men, and, withal, a penetrating judge of character.

As he entered the bar, Martin Van Buren was in the act of closing an argument that had occupied the attention of the court for several hours. Turning to take his seat, he recognized the stranger who was near him.

"Colonel Burr!" said Van Buren in a low voice, extending his hand, "I am very glad to see you. Our cause was reached this morning, but as I could not think of defaulting you in your absence, which I believed to be unavoidable, I exchanged our case with the one just submitted. I hope, Colonel, you are well."

"Quite well, I thank you; I am obliged for this courtesy. I did not leave New York quite as soon as I expected, and it is a long way [illegible] is getting mercurial, I fancy, since she is establishing her temples so far in the interior of our State. But I suppose our case is the next one to be tried."

"No, Colonel, I am sorry to say that there is a [illegible] of some kind that is to be disposed of next." At this period in the conversation the voice of the crier announced the adjournment of court until the next morning, and the two lawyers left the Court-house together.

The reader is already aware that the stranger who has been described was Aaron Burr—a name conspicuous in American history. His fall from greatness his pecuniary misfortunes—had compelled him to resume the practice of a profession in which he had few, if any, rivals, and which had been to him a stepping-stone to the highest honors.

He was at Utica on this occasion as the opponent of Martin Van Buren in one of those great ejectment suits, which in the early history of the State occupied so much of the attention of its courts. Van Buren at this time was one of the ablest lawyers of the bar—a State Senator and politician of rare political abilities, skilled in the art of managing the inclination and prejudices of the people, wielding an influence which [illegible] him a powerful, if not successful, rival of DeWitt Clinton

Colonel Burr was at this time unknown in the politics of the State and nation, though he had occupied a seat in the Senate of the United States, and had contended with Jefferson for the Presidential chair of the nation, missing the great prize by two or three votes, and winning the Vice Presidency with little opposition He was now merely the lawyer A few years after his admission to the bar he removed from Albany to New York city, where he became a successful, though friendly rival of Alexander [illegible] each of these great men had a high, if not an exalted, opinion of the other's talents. To the strength and facility of Hamilton's imaginations, his fine rhetorical powers, his occasional flashes of poetical genius, his acute reasoning powers, and the force of his declamation, Burr paid the tribute of his admiration. The latter valued himself little upon his oratorical powers His pleading at the bar were more in the style of conversation than oratory—the conversation of an enlightened, well educated, thoroughly disciplined lawyer. In replying to Hamilton's splendid legal speeches he would select the vulnerable, yet vital points, and quietly demolish them, leaving all the other points untouched In a twenty-minute speech he has been known to completely neutralize the effects of one of Hamilton's long, elaborate and ornate addresses.

Hamilton and Burr were occasionally associated in the trial of a case. On such occasions they were almost irresistible It is related that on one occasion they were retained to defend a man indicted for murder, and who was generally believed to be guilty, though the circumstances under which the crime was committed rendered it a deeply interesting case of circumstantial evidence During the progress of the trial as the circumstances were developed, suspicion began to attach to the principal witness against the prisoner Burr and Hamilton brought all their skill in cross-examination to bear on the witness, in the hope of dragging out of him his dreadful secret But with singular sagacity and coolness he eluded their efforts, though they succeeded in darkening the shadows of suspicion that fell upon him and strengthening their convictions of their client's innocence.

Before the cross examination of the witness was concluded, the court adjourned for tea

"I believe our client is not guilty but I have no doubt that Brigham, that cunning witness, is really the guilty man: but he is so shrewd, cool and deep that I am fearful his testimony will hang poor Blair, our client in spite of all we can do," said Hamilton to Burr, while on their way from the court-house to the hotel

"I agree with you that Blair is not guilty, and Brigham is and I believe we can catch him. I have a plan that will detect him, if I am not wonderfully mistaken" said Burr He then proceeded to explain to his associate, the nature of his plan

"You may succeed" said Hamilton, after listening to the plan "It's worth trying, at any rate, though you have a man of iron to deal with"

Colonel Burr was compelled to remain at Utica for several days. During his stay he divested himself of that reticent and coldness which usually characterized his intercourse with strangers, and became a general favorite with the members of the bar who were present

One afternoon a number of young lawyers amused themselves by shooting at a target with pistols As the exercises continued long after the adjournment of court for the day, many lawyers and others who were attending court assembled to witness the sport Among the deeply interested spectators was Colonel Burr. While keenly watching the effect of each shot, two young lawyers who had been engaged in shooting, approached him.

"Col Burr," said one of them "we should be very happy to witness your skill at target-shooting."

"My skill at target shooting? How came you to suppose I had any skill as a marksman?" said Burr fixing his piercing eye upon the speaker

"You are an old soldier Col Burr and we have always heard you spoken of as the best shot in America" said the young man

"It is many years since I was a soldier, and I have had but little practice with the pistol since leaving the army Times of peace do not, or at least they should not, furnish many occasions for the use of that weapon since those occasions often have a lasting regret. But as your invitation to join your sport was so respectfully given, I will accept it. At least I shall shoot once at the target That will be sufficient for my unpracticed hand. Let me see your pistols"

Several were brought him selecting one of them, he balanced it a moment in his hand sighted across the barrel, then, taking his stand at the line from which each contestant fired, he raised his arm and presented the pistol

It was a moment of intense, almost dramatic interest. Before the spectators, pistol in hand stood Aaron Burr—the very arm outstretched which, on the heights of Weehawken, laid the illustrious Hamilton cold in death The eye that was now sighting the pistol had gleamed along a deathful weapon in mortal combat—had beheld his foe sink at his feet bathed in blood. But a quick flash—a sharp report broke the spell that held the spectators—the bullet had sped. Aaron Burr had sent it home to the target A faint smile passed over his features as an exclamation of astonishment announced the unerring shot Handing the weapon to its owner he turned and left the field without uttering a word

After tea, Burr ordered the Sheriff to provide an extra number of lights for the evening session, and to arrange them so that their rays would converge against the pillar in the court room near the place occupied by the witness

The evening session opened, and Burr resumed the cross-examination of the witness. It was a test of the profound skill and subtlety of the lawyer—the self possession, courage and tact of the witness, standing on the very brink of a horrid gulf, calmly and intrepidly resisting the efforts of the terrible man before him to push him over At last, after dexterously leading the witness to the appropriate point, Burr suddenly seized a lamp in each hand, and holding them in such a manner that their light fell instantaneously upon the face of the witness, he exclaimed in a startling voice, like the voice of the avenger of blood, "Gentlemen of the jury, behold the murderer!"

With a wild, convulsive start—a face of ashy pallor—eyes starting from their sockets—lips apart, his whole attitude evincing terror, the man sprang from his chair For a moment he stood motionless, struggling to regain his self-possession. But it was only a momentary struggle; the terrible words of the advocate "shivered along his arteries," shaking every nerve with palsying fear Conscious that the eyes of all in the court room were fixed upon him, reading the hidden deeds of his life, he left the witness stand and walked shrinkingly to the door of the court room. But he was prevented from making his escape by the Sheriff. This scene, so thrilling and startling, may perhaps be imagined, though it cannot be described. Like the fall of David Deans, in the court room, before judges, jurors, and lawyers, when the doom of Effie, his youngest daughter, was pronounced by the testimony of her elder sister, Jennie Deans, it struck the spectators with silent awe; changing the whole aspect of the trial, overthrowing in an instant the hypothesis which the Attorney General was confident would send his prisoner to the gallows saving an innocent man from the deathful hands of a skillful perjurer

The false witness was arrested, two indictments found against him, one for murder, another for perjury. He was acquitted on his trial for murder, but subsequently convicted of perjury and sentenced to a long imprisonment

The high-toned liberality and generosity with which Hamilton and Burr conducted the contests of the bar created no bitterness or animosity. They continued friends until they became great partisan leaders—until the polluting influences of politics their collision as rival statesmen, created that relentless antagonism which culminated in the tragic scene when Hamilton fell by the hand of Burr, in the most famous duel in history—a duel which doomed its survivor to obloquy and reproach which he never outlived, and which, with the alleged treason for which he was tried and acquitted in 1807, ostracised him from his rank among great men of the nation

At the time Burr is introduced to the reader he has long drank of the Marah of the waters of disappointment and sorrow—had long labored at the task of Sisyphus—the mountain and rock.

It was Theodosia, his daughter, so lovely, so pure, so intellectual, so haughty, and yet so soft and gentle, that opened to Aaron Burr the brightest page in this blotted volume of his life. "She was nearly a complete realization of his ideal of a woman." Upon her he lavished the wealth of a soul that overflowed with tenderness Long after his fall from power she was the solitary star shining in beautiful luster over the darkened and rough pathway of his life.

During his trial for high treason, at Richmond, in 1807, Theodosia, then the brilliant leader of society in the most aristocratic city of the South—the wife of Joseph Alston, a distinguished citizen of South Carolina—by her devotion and influence powerfully aided her father's defense. In the darkest hour of that memorable legal drama she evinced her deep affliction in language as heroic as it was beautiful. "My vanity," said she, "would be greater if I had not been placed so near you, and yet, my pride is our relationship I had rather not live than not be the daughter of such a man"

A few years after the Richmond trial, which resulted in a victory for Burr, Theodosia met a fate which is still enveloped in gloom and mystery At the close of the year 1812 she sailed from Charleston in a vessel bound for New York for the purpose of visiting her father. Her husband was then Governor of South Carolina Though he provided everything conducive to her safety and comfort which wealth and influence could command, the vessel never reached its destination, was never heard of after leaving Charleston harbor At last all hope ended, the certainty that Theodosia was dead came home to them and Aaron Burr was bereaved as few have ever been bereaved—left to "a life all winter, war within himself to wage" Still, the properties of a mind stern, uncomplaining and calm, a profound, scheming, subtle and powerful intellect sustained him, and while the musings of his solitude became a votive offering to the dead—a rightful homage to their memory—he retained superiority among men and brilliancy at the bar He was endowed by nature with the power of gaining ascendency over those with whom he was brought into contact. Whenever he desired to please he could exercise blandishments which none but Aaron Burr ever possessed Then he had attractions for all smiles for the silent deep attention for the learned, badinage for the gay, sentiment for the grave, and romance for the young.

The famous London auctioneer, whose advertisement stated that the only drawback on a certain country place which he had for sale were the "noise of the nightingale, and the litter of the rose leaves," was the right sort of a man for his profession But the New York auctioneers go ahead of him The following extract from one of their advertisements shows how they do up things He says the sale will come off "On the premises This will be one of the grand suburban chefs d'oeuvre of the season"

"Poets may sing of some magical fairy land
'Mid grottoes and rimpling rill
But a real cozy home by a practical ocean strand
Near steamer and railroads more beautiful still

'Neath the clustering grape and the apple tree o'er you,
From a calm peaceful home you serenely look down
While the world's busy commerce is passing before you,
On the din and the turmoil, and dust of the town

"A limited number of tickets will be issued to those who really desire to purchase this magnificent water front property commanding the finest and most extended view of Long Island Sound The choicest plots have not yet been offered, and will be sold, according to Mr Blackwell's invariable custom without reserve Grafulla's famous band will discourse eloquent music on water and land Superb banquet under colossal tent Harrison the great improvisatore Personal application must be made at office of auctioneer"

The journals of Milan state that Signor Verdi has informed the municipal authorities of that city of his intention to write a funeral mass in honor of Alessandro Manzoni to be performed on the first anniversary of his death Signor Verdi will himself direct the rehearsals and conduct the performance

We are still hopeful that the commercial interest of the country at large will not be depressed by the stringent conditions of the money market which was universal throughout the United States last year notwithstanding the fact that prophets of evil have not been wanting who predicted a scarcity of money with the fair inauguration of the fall trade

An exchange of the 3d instant from Chicago says

The money market is well supplied with loanable funds on good negotiable paper There is a much larger amount of currency coming into the city from the Northwest than is going into the country Business moves rather slowly as the national holiday approaches but the season of general relaxation is upon us and the current of financial affairs seems comparatively untroubled and now we are ready to discuss the autumn prospects of trade and commerce The promise that we shall have good crops is favorable California is in the midst of a grand wheat harvest nearly equal to the best she ever gathered in. The apparently unequal distribution of rain over our wheat growing areas rather disturbs the hopefulness of some, yet on the whole the general condition is that we shall harvest an average crop But the best aspect of our commercial heavens is in the fact that the last six or eight months our exports have been steadily and with accelerated power gaining on our imports giving every assurance of a safe and profitable autumn trade for the entire country

Pacific Coast Produce in England.

The similarity of climate in British Columbia and Oregon together with the superiority of our soil, justifies the assumption that our productions rank as high in the market of England as those of that province The following from the Victoria Colonist of the 15th gives a good idea of the estimation in which the produce from British Columbia is held The Colonist says

The following circular addressed to the Provincial Secretary of British Columbia, is valuable as showing the quality of the cereal produce of the province

LONDON, Eng, 9th June 1873

SIR I have received from you a case of cereals and peas, in small packages, certified under the hand of the Hon Charles Good to contain ordinary samples of British Columbian field produce They have been submitted for valuation to a highly respectable firm of corn agents in Mark Lane, and I now inclose a copy of their report, which is generally to the following effect

The wheat, if here now, would sell at 62s to 73s for 496 lbs ex granary, being 1s to 2s above the value of Californian of average quality.

The oats are also very fine, and if here now would fetch 30s for 336 lbs ex ship They compare very favorably with the best Scotch, which command the highest price in this market.

The barley is of fine quality and if it had arrived here in time for the malting season (say not later than March) would have sold at 45s to 48s for 448 lbs ex ship It is equal to the best English and is worth about 10s ⅌ quarter more than the Eastern Canada barley for feeding, which is the only Canadian barley imported

The peas (which are "black eye"), if in hard condition, would sell at 46s to 48s for 504 lbs ex granary They are equal to the best that come to this market, and are about 10s a quarter better than the average imported from Eastern Canada

These valuations are given on the basis of this year's prices of grain which are higher than the average of most years They are given also on the supposition that the articles arrive here in good condition which, in the case of all descriptions of grain, is very important

The hops are very good, and are worth fully 5d ⅌ lb more than the best East Canada hops

From the Mark Lane Express of June 23d we learn that the arrivals off the coast during the ten days preceding numbered 45 cargoes of which 15 cargoes were wheat, 17 maize, 8 barley, 3 beans, 1 rye, and 1 dari. The same paper reports the sales of 20 cargoes Californian wheat at 56s 9d@63s; Oregon, 62s, spring American, 58s 6d to 58s 6d
